

Ladies of Leisure

The first fifteen years of my life was spent without seeing very much of my parents. They were both from wealthy families in England. I was born in 1903 on my parents estate and was almost immediately left in the care of my nanny. My parents were off traveling the world and only on rare occasions would they appear to give me birthday or Christmas gifts and fawn over me like they really cared. I was left to my own devices. I was very well educated and told many times I was very strong willed. My parents died when I was sixteen. A train they were traveling on was swept down a mountain, by an avalanche, in the Alps. I was raised for a few years thereafter by my grandmother. You will meet her in one of my books. She is the one that taught me about sex and love. My sexual life is the focus of this book you are about to read and there will be more to follow, outlining my life with my best friend and lover Contessa Daisy Montrose. She never uses her title. In fact, she hates it. This book reflects our meeting and our first year as a couple. Although it may titillate, its intention is to show the love we shared over our lifetime. It was hard for us to share our love in our part of the world and in our time in history. I hope this writing finds that the world has changed its views, but, down deep, I fear it may never truly change at all.
