When Robbie Munro lands the biggest case of his life, defending flamboyant entrepreneur, Larry Kirkslap, he finds himself the subject of an assassins contract - he just doesnt know why. Murdered call girls, violated sepulchres and a marriage proposal all keep Robbie busy, while he tries to stay alive - and arrange a surprise birthday party for his dad. Number four in the cult legal thriller Best Defence Series. Also available on Kindle: #1 Relatively Guilty #2 Duty Man #3 Sharp Practice #5 Crime Fiction #6 Last Will Willie McIntyre is a partner in Scotlands oldest Law Firm. For the past twenty years or so he has worked in the field of criminal defence, and has managed during that time, and with the full co-operation of Mrs McIntyre, to produce four sons and a series of stories featuring defence lawyer, Robbie Munro. Each novel exploits the kind of authentic court-room, prison and procedural details that stem from years of first-hand experience. The action is centred around Willies birthplace, the Royal Burgh of Linlithgow in West Lothian, but takes place all over the Larger Central Belt of Scotland. Its the Scottish criminal justice system, but not as you know it.
